SITUATION SUMMARY

Significant Events - National

- (New York Times) – House and Senate Prepare Measures to Keep Homeland Security Funded: Just a day before the Department of Homeland Security is set to run out of money, the Senate was preparing a bill that would finance the department without restrictions on President Obama's immigration actions. House Republicans were coming together on a counterproposal that would provide the agency with funds for only three weeks. The Senate is expected to vote today on its bill, which would provide the department with financing for the rest of the fiscal year, through September. The House is expected to reject that measure, increasing the prospect that a partial shutdown of the department would be averted only through the shorter-term funding accord that the House is expected to propose.
- (New York Times) – F.C.C. Approves Net Neutrality Rules, Classifying Broadband Internet Service as a Utility: The new rules, approved 3 to 2 along party lines, are intended to ensure that no content is blocked and that the Internet is not divided into pay-to-play fast lanes for Internet and media companies that can afford it and slow lanes for everyone else. Those prohibitions are hallmarks of the net neutrality concept.

Significant Events - International

- (New York Times) - Rebels Accuse Saudis of Fueling Unrest to Divide Yemen: The leader of the Houthi rebel group here, in an unusually combative speech Thursday that reflected frustration by the rebel movement at its deepening isolation, accused Saudi Arabia, Yemen's powerful neighbor, of financing armed opponents and trying to divide the country. The Houthis control the capital, Sana, in northern Yemen, and much of the nation's military. Yet their authority faces a sharp challenge from Yemen's former president, Abdu Rabbu Mansour Hadi, who fled to the southern city of Aden on Saturday and, with the backing of Saudi Arabia and other Persian Gulf monarchies, declared that he was still the country's legitimate leader. Yemen has been without a government since late January, when Mr. Hadi and his cabinet resigned under pressure from the Houthis. Now the country appears more and more splintered between competing fiefs in the north and south, raising fears that it will suffer the same fate as Libya, riven by increasingly bloody factional fighting between rival governments.

Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

- SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A storm system approaching from the north will bring rain showers, cooler temperatures and some mountain snow through Saturday. Dry conditions are expected Sunday followed by another storm system with rain showers Monday and Tuesday.

Medford Weather:

An upper trough will gradually move south tonight, but the trough axis is still expected to be in northern California early Saturday morning. The upper trough will move south Saturday and precipitation will decrease from north to south and skies will clear out. The upper flow will turn northeast and usher in a colder, drier air mass. Saturday night skies will be clear and we'll see temperatures take a nosedive. Dry and milder weather returns Sunday.

Reno Weather:

Winter system is on track to impact the Sierra and northwest Nevada today and Saturday. Accumulating snow and difficult travel conditions are likely in the Sierra with lighter accumulations possible in western Nevada. This system will slowly exit Sunday with another chance at precipitation possible late Monday into Tuesday.

San Francisco Weather:

A storm system will continue to bring showers and cooler temperatures to the area through the weekend. Another weak system will bring additional shower chances to the area on Monday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

A weather system moves into the area today leading to cooler and wetter weather into the weekend. The potential exists for snow impacting some travel in the mountains above 3500 feet, and more so above 6000 feet.

Hanford Weather:

A storm system that originated in western Canada is tracking south into central California and will bring wet weather to much of the region this afternoon through the weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

A weather pattern change will begin tonight as there will be periods of rain through early next week with lower snow levels expected across mountain locations, possibly affecting the interstate 5 corridor Saturday through Monday. Temperatures will be below normal as well through early next week.

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A low pressure system from the north will bring cooler weather with periods of showers for tonight through Tuesday night or early Wednesday. There will be strong gust west winds in the mountains and deserts for tonight and Saturday, decreasing from the north Saturday night. Dry with seasonal temperatures for Thursday.

Southeast California Weather:

A storm system will drop south today into Sunday resulting in gusty winds and possible showers. Temperatures will drop several degrees between today and Sunday. There is the potential for steadier precipitation across Mohave County on Sunday and Sunday night. Unsettled weather will linger across the area Monday into Tuesday night.
